Crater Lake National Park

Winter Trails

Routes and Trails For Snowshoes and Cross-Country Skis Few people visit the Cascade Mountains in the winter, but for those who do Crater Lake National Park features many miles of marked ski trails and unmarked routes. Some provide stunning views of the lake while other include broad vistas of the Klamath Basin. All trails are ungroomed and some may be hard to follow. Pay close attention to markers affixed to trees and orange poles in the open stretches.

Things to Know Before You Go

In the winter, weather can make viewing the lake impossible for almost 50% of the time. Access to the park and Rim Village area is only through Highway 62 and Munson Valley Road (7 mile road from Hwy 62 to Rim). Camping is only allowed in the backcountry during the winter. A free permit is required and camps can be no closer to a plowed road than 1 mile. Permits are available at the Steel Visitor Center by Park Headquarters.

Entering the caldera is extremely dangerous and illegal, due to the cliffs and rockslides. Skiing and snowboarding are prohibited on roads and parking areas open to automobile traffic. As a courtesy to skiers, snowshoers should refrain from walking on ski tracks.

Easier Trails

Mazama Loop

Trailhead: Just north of Hwy 62 and summer fee booth, 4 miles south of HQ Markings: Blue diamonds on trees and

orange poles in clearings Distance: 1.7 miles

Features: Good trail for beginning skiers. Flat rail loops along Annie Creek Canyon.

West Rim Drive

Trailhead: Snowramp across from Rim

Village Restrooms.

Markings: None, unplowed road
Distance: 1.2 miles to Discovery Point, 2.3 miles to Wizard Island Overlook, 3.1 miles to Union Peak Overlook, 6 miels to North Junction Features: Most popular trail for views of Crater Lake. Discovery Point is a broad level viewpoint overlooking Wizard Island. Wizard Island Overlook is a small viepoint providing a closer look at the island. The road climbs 240 feet to Union Peak Overlook for views of other Cascade volcanoes. North Junction is past Watchman and Hillman peaks where North Entrane Road comes in (groomed snowmobile route).

Beyond the Union Peak Overlook, the road traverses a steep cliff face on the north side of Watchman. This area has steep dropoffs and avalanche-prone slopes. Do not hesitate to remove your skis or turn back if conditions warrant.
